HERBERT HOOVER ADDS LAMONT TO CABINET

LAMONT WILL BE SECRETARY OF COMMERCE

IS CHICAGO BUSINESS MAN, AND HEAD OF A LARGE
FOUNDRY

PRESIDENT-ELECT HAS NOW COMPLETED SELECTION OF CABINET

Washington, March 2.—(UP)—President-elect Hoover's cabinet was completed today after the announcement that Robert Lamont of Chicago, head of a large steel foundry, will be secretary of commerce.

The other nine men whose appointments already are conceded are: Secretary of state—Henry L. Stimson of New York.

Secretary of treasury—Andrew W. Mellon (incumbent), of Pennsylvania.

Secretary of war—James W. Good of Iowa.

Attorney-general—William D. Mitchell of Minnesota.

Postmaster-general—Walter F. Brown of Ohio.

Secretary of navy—Charles Francis Adams, of Massachusetts.

Secretary of agriculture—Arthur M. Hyde, Missouri.

Secretary of interior—Ray Lyman Wilbur of California.

Secretary of labor—Jas. J. Davis, of Pennsylvania.

Lamont, an engineer by profession, is the "surprise" for the commerce post which was promised by Mr. Hoover's associates. The frenzied speculation about this last post came today upon this name, which was confirmed officially.

Lamont, a native of Detroit, is 61 years old and a director of several of the nation's leading industrial firms, including Armour & Co., the American Radiator Company, the International Harvester Company and the Illinois Bell Telephone Company. He was educated in the University of Michigan.

He was chief in the procurement division of the army ordnance department in Washington from October, 1918, to February, 1919, and held the rank of colonel.

Washington, March 2.—Rumors of opposition against two of President-elect Hoover's selections were heard at the capitol today.

Whether the dissatisfaction in some senatorial quarters against these two men—James W. Good, Chicago, secretary of war, and William D. Mitchell, attorney general, will develop into real fights against confirmation could not be determined today.

Some southern senators, interested in Muscle Shoals legislation, have criticized the Good appointment on the ground that he is friendly to the so-called "power trust." The opposition against Mitchell is by those who claim he had a part in suppressing a grand jury investigation into the Jackson Barnett case in Oklahoma last summer.

Ordinarily, cabinet appointments by an incoming president are confirmed perfunctorily at the short special session of the senate called for this purpose after the inaugural ceremonies. A fight on confirmation would be unusual.

The senate waged a successful fight against one of President Coolidge's cabinet appointments, the nomination of Charles Beecher Warren of Detroit as attorney general, but this did not come at the time of his inauguration, as he retained the Harding cabinet.

Washington, March 2.—Rain and cold weather was forecast for inauguration day at the nation's capital by the United States weather bureau today.

The official report issued by the weather bureau today for the district reads:

"Increasing cloudiness Sunday, followed by rain Sunday night and probably Monday. Colder Monday."

OFFICIAL WASHINGTON WON-DERS WHO SECRETARY OF

By THOMAS L. STOKES
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, March 2.—(UP)—President-elect Hoover spent his last regular day as a private citizen today, for some time at least.

He devoted himself to resting, with his family about him, and clearing up a few last minute matters, while official Washington sought to learn the identity of the only member of the cabinet not hitherto revealed, secretary of commerce, the post Hoover filled for seven-and-a-half years.

The other "surprise" cabinet member is former Governor Arthur M. Hyde, of Missouri, who will be secretary of agriculture. This selection was revealed last night, checking for the moment a frenzy of speculation unequalled before in similar circumstances. The speculation was resumed over the commerce post.

Mr. Hoover draws from the camp of his leading pre-convention foe, former Governor Frank O. Lowden of Illinois, in bringing Hyde into his official family. Hyde supported Lowden for the presidential nomination.

Hyde, who is 51, has participated in farm relief movements. Lowden was champion of the McNary-Haugen bill which Mr. Hoover refused to espouse. Hyde had not been mentioned in the wealth of speculative gossip.

He was born at Princeton, Mo., July 12, 1877. He was graduated from the University of Michigan, took a law degree at Iowa State university, and entered politics as mayor of Princeton after practicing law for 15 years, 1900-1915, in that city, he was governor from 1921 to 1925.

With but two days remaining before he becomes president, Mr. Hoover went about his business today quietly and calmly.

The next president is no sentimentalist, but he must in these last hours feel an occasional thrill, tinged by a recurring wave of responsibility, as he looks backward toward the Iowa farm boy he was to the high and mighty office he will undertake Monday.

There was no outward indication, however. He arose at his regular hour today, seven o'clock, had his breakfast at eight, and conducted himself as if this were merely another day.

His calling list included but two persons today. Senator Schall of Minnesota and Governor Myers V. Cooper of Ohio.

TO REMOVE CREW FROM STRANDED SHIP

Marshfield, Ore., March 2.—(UP)—The crew of 32 men aboard the steamer Sunjamco, aground in Coos Bay on the Oregon coast, was expected to be removed from the stranded ship early today by the cutter Red Wing. The ship is lying seven miles north of the Coos Bay bar and inside of the outside line of breakers. The Sunjamco was believed ready to break up.

DRIVER ON ROADS

By HECTOR PERRIER

St. Paul, March 2.—One long legislative fight was ended today and another was a step nearer the battle ground after Governor Theodore Christianson signed the old age pension bill and the senate highway committee recommended for passage a highway patrolmen bill.

When the governor affixed his signature to the pension bill he put an end to a fight which was started six years ago.

The bill provides that counties may replace the old poor farm system by payment of $1 a day pension to all needy persons over 70 years of age who have lived in the county for 15 or more years.

Each board of county commissioners is authorized to put the proposal to the county citizens by a popular vote and to appropriate sufficient funds to carry out the plan.

It was estimated that approximately 2,500 Minnesotans are entitled to the pension.

The senate finance committee gave its approval to a bill which would provide a force of 75 highway patrolmen to guard the roads and enforce the traffic laws after Commissioner Babcock explained the need of the patrol and outlined their duties.

Babcock pointed out that the patrolmen would not be asked to arrest every motorist "who drives more than 35 miles an hour." He said that he often drove his own machine as fast as 60 or 70 miles an hour on a clear road.

"What we need," Babcock said, "is a force of men who will arrest the reckless or careless driver and to keep traffic moving."

The commissioner reiterated his need for more highway funds than are available to his department this year and more than would be available under a four-cent gasoline tax.

Over in the house Representative Louis Berg of St. Paul introduced a bill which if passed will deprive the cartoonists and humorists of a lot of fun.

The Berg bill would prohibit lunch counters in drug stores.

The St. Paul representative suggested that if drug stores must operate lunch counters they should be in a room separated from that in which the drugs are sold.

WAR FORMALLY RENOUNCED BY 10 FOREIGN NATIONS

Washington, March 2.—(UP)—War was formally renounced today as an instrument of national policy by 10 foreign nations and the United States when their representatives met at the state department to deposit their ratifications of the Kellogg anti-war pact. The treaty will become effective when the ratifications of the remaining four original treaty signatories are deposited here. Of these tardy nations, France and Poland have ratified but the documents have not arrived in Washington; Belgium and Japan have not yet ratified the treaty.

NATIONALISTS STILL IN CONTROL OF PEKING, CHINA

Peking, China, March 2.—(UP)—Nationalist authorities apparently still were in control of the city today after an insurrection by former northern soldiers who had enlisted with the nationalists. Martial law was declared in Peking. Scores were killed in the clashes which followed attempts to disarm the northern soldiers.

AGED RECLUSE DIES; LEAVES FORTUNE IN BONDS

St. Louis, Mo., March 2.—(UP)—Stocks and bonds worth $40,400 and deeds to real estate worth $35,000 were found in the dingy, dark $4.90 a month room of Frank J. Wuerz, aged recluse, after he died here. Expense books discovered showed expenditures of but a few cents a day. Neighbors said he used to walk abroad at night and collect boxes and old paving blocks to burn in his battered room stove.

HOME BREW DECLARED WORSE THAN MOONSHINE

HAS MORE HARMFUL EFFECT ON SYSTEM THAN WHISKEY, SAYS VOLSTEAD

PLAYS THE LAWS WHICH PERMIT
SALE OF MALT FOR MANU-FACTURE OF SAME

St. Paul, March 2.—(UP)—Home brew is infinitely worse than moonshine and it has a more harmful effect on human system than whiskey, we have it on the authority of Andrew J. Volstead, father of the national prohibition enforcement law.

"It is said that home brew isn't intoxicating," Volstead remarked at a public legislative hearing here Friday night on a proposed bill which would prohibit the sale of malt. "The stuff is worse, infinitely worse, than moonshine whiskey."

A chorus of "noes" greeted the former Minnesota representative's statement and he was made the target of a barrage of questions a few moments later when he flayed the laws which "permit the sale of malt for the manufacture of home brew, openly and brazenly."

Opposition to the measure was voiced by Senator John D. Sullivan, St. Cloud, labor leaders and bakers. Senator Sullivan pointed out that the production of barley in Minnesota would be seriously affected by the passage of the anti-malt bill. He also declared that the proposed law was even more drastic than the national laws.

"The United States authorities have not seen fit to insert any such drastic provisions in their statutes as this bill contains," Sullivan said.

"You are not going to help the farmers by the passage of this bill but will injure them and drive the people from drinking something innocent to something worse."

Both the house and the senate are expected to act on the bill in the near future.

Ask Immediate Relief for the Indians on the Cass Lake Reservation

St. Paul, March 2.—(UP)—Immediate relief for the Indians on the Cass Lake reservation was asked of the secretary of the interior Friday by Governor Theodore Christianson, following reports that conditions on the reservation were deplorable.

Dr. J. A. Thabes, Brainerd, and other members of the state board of health, informed the governor that they had investigated conditions at the reservation last week and found that many of the Indians were in need of food and clothing. Influenza was also prevalent among the Indians, the governor was informed.

"Conditions of extreme privation among the Cass Lake Indians demands immediate relief from your department," the governor declared in a telegram to Secretary of the Interior Roy O. West.

"If funds are not available, they must be provided by congress before adjournment."

"I would not urge this if it were not absolutely necessary."

MAXIMUM SENTENCE FIVE YEARS IN PRISON AND A $10,000 FINE

FEDERAL JUDGES TO DISCRIMIN-
ATE BETWEEN HABITUAL AND
SLIGHT VIOLATIONS

MARKS SUPREME PROHIBITION
ENFORCEMENT EFFORT ON
EVE OF NEW REGIME

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, March 2.—A new law providing a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for liquor law violations, intended to curb bootlegging, came into existence today when President Coolidge signed the Jones bill.

Federal judges are specifically directed in the new act to discriminate between criminal or habitual violations and casual or slight violations, in imposing sentences thereunder.

The measure is effective at once. Together with the $3,000,000 added prohibition appropriation for the next fiscal year, it will mark a supreme prohibition enforcement effort on the threshold of the new Hoover administration.

The drastic law quipping present penalties, is a triumph for Assistant Attorney-General Mabel Walker Willebrandt and the Anti-Saloon League, who have pushed it for five years. Sponsored by Senator Wesley L. Jones, republican of Washington, the measure was expedited through congress in the closing days of the session and passed by large majorities in both houses.

The effect of the law is simply to provide another means of prosecuting vendors of liquor. Its clause providing the maximum of five years or $10,000, or both, applies in cases of illegal manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of liquor, but not to mere possession.

United States attorneys, however, still have the alternatives of proceeding under some of the misdemeanor clauses of the Volstead act, or under the revenue liquor-tax laws, against minor violators.

Justice department authorities said the act will almost entirely supplant the conspiracy statute, which is now extensively used in liquor cases in which prosecutors seek heavy prison sentences for commercial violators, including big-scale bootleggers, moonshiners and rum-runners. The senior circuit judges in conference have twice criticized this use of the conspiracy statute as bad law.

Under the Jones act, the U. S. attorney will be required to obtain an indictment, as the law makes the violations described felonies. At present prosecutions against liquor-law offenders are usually undertaken on information sworn to by the officials, except in conspiracy cases which require indictments. Wets in congress charged the act would immediately add thousands of prisoners to the already crowded jails and prisons, and there was some indication that illegal liquor-dealers might go out of business in some cases, and increase prices greatly in others as a result.

The text of the new law, which was attacked by wets and some dries in congress as ambiguous, is as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., that whenever a penalty or penalties are prescribed in a criminal prosecution by the national prohibition act, as amended and supplemented, for the illegal manufacture, sale, transportation or exportation of intoxicating liquor, as defined by Section 1, Title 11, of the national prohibition act, the penalty imposed for each such offense shall be a fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, provided, that it is the intent of congress that the court, in imposing sentence hereunder, should discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of intoxicating liquor, or attempts to commercialize violations of the law."

"This act shall not repeal nor eliminate any minimum penalty for the first or any subsequent offense now provided by the said national prohibition act."

MAXIMUM SENTENCE FIVE YEARS IN PRISON AND A $10,000 FINE

FEDERAL JUDGES TO DISCRIMIN-
ATE BETWEEN HABITUAL AND
SLIGHT VIOLATIONS

MARKS SUPREME PROHIBITION
ENFORCEMENT EFFORT ON
EVE OF NEW REGIME

By HERBERT LITTLE
(United Press Staff Correspondent)

Washington, March 2.—A new law providing a maximum sentence of five years in prison and a $10,000 fine for liquor law violations, intended to curb bootlegging, came into existence today when President Coolidge signed the Jones bill.

Federal judges are specifically directed in the new act to discriminate between criminal or habitual violations and casual or slight violations, in imposing sentences thereunder.

The measure is effective at once. Together with the $3,000,000 added prohibition appropriation for the next fiscal year, it will mark a supreme prohibition enforcement effort on the threshold of the new Hoover administration.

The drastic law quintupling present penalties, is a triumph for Assistant Attorney-General Mabel Walker Willebrandt and the Anti-Saloon League, who have pushed it for five years. Sponsored by Senator Wesley L. Jones, republican of Washington, the measure was expedited through congress in the closing days of the session and passed by large majorities in both houses.

The effect of the law is simply to provide another means of prosecuting vendors of liquor. Its clause providing the maximum of five years or $10,000, or both, applies in cases of illegal manufacture, sale, transportation, importation or exportation of liquor, but not to mere possession.

United States attorneys, however, still have the alternatives of proceeding under some of the misdemeanor clauses of the Volstead act, or under the revenue liquor-tax laws, against minor violators.

Justice department authorities said the act will almost entirely supplant the conspiracy statute, which is now extensively used in liquor cases in which prosecutors seek heavy prison sentences for commercial violators, including big-scale bootleggers, moonshiners and rum-runners. The senior circuit judges in conference have twice criticized this use of the conspiracy statute as bad law.

Under the Jones act, the U. S. attorney will be required to obtain an indictment, as the law makes the violations described felonies. At present prosecutions against liquor-law offenders are usually undertaken on information sworn to by the officials, except in conspiracy cases which require indictments. Wets in congress charged the act would immediately add thousands of prisoners to the already crowded jails and prisons, and there was some indication that illegal liquor-dealers might go out of business in some cases, and increase prices greatly in others as a result.

The text of the new law, which was attacked by wets and some dries in congress as ambiguous, is as follows:

"Be it enacted, etc., that whenever a penalty or penalties are prescribed in a criminal prosecution by the national prohibition act, as amended and supplemented, for the illegal manufacture, sale, transportation or exportation of intoxicating liquor, as defined by Section 1, Title 11, of the national prohibition act, the penalty imposed for each such offense shall be a fine not to exceed $10,000 or imprisonment not to exceed five years, or both, provided, that it is the intent of congress that the court, in imposing sentence hereunder, should discriminate between casual or slight violations and habitual sales of intoxicating liquor, or attempts to commercialize violations of the law."

"This act shall not repeal nor eliminate any minimum penalty for the first or any subsequent offense now provided by the said national prohibition act."

TWO MORE ARRESTS MADE IN MACHINE GUN MASSACRE

Chicago, March 1. — (AP) — Two more arrests were made today in the round-up of 17 men named by Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege as the most likely suspects in the machine gun massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran beer runners.

The new prisoners are Sam "Gin Gin" Giannanna, a leader in the "Forty-two Gang" of West siders and Salvatore Strache, whose underworld connections were not determined.

"Gin Gin" was questioned closely by detectives who believe he may have been among the killers, with Jack McGurn and Rocco Panelli, who are said to have been identified by two witnesses as occupants of the squad car in which the machine gunners escaped after the massacre.

The Peertless automobile, which someone tried to blow up with dynamite and which is thought to be the car used by the "firing squad," has been traced through seven former owners. Pat Gleason, who gave his address as a vacant lot when he took out a license tag, was believed to be the last owner of the car, although he could not be found today.

TWO MORE ARRESTS

MADE IN MACHINE
GUN MASSACRE

Chicago, March 1. — (UP) — Two more arrests were made today in the round-up of 17 men named by Deputy Police Commissioner John Stege as the most likely suspects in the machine gun massacre of seven "Bugs" Moran beer runners.

The new prisoners are Sam "Gin Gin" Giancana, a leader in the "Forty-two Gang" of West siders and Salvatore Strache, whose underworld connections were not determined.

"Gin Gin" was questioned closely by detectives who believe he may have been among the killers, with Jack McGurn and Rocco Panelli, who are said to have been identified by two witnesses as occupants of the squad car in which the machine gunners escaped after the massacre.

The Peerless automobile, which someone tried to blow up with dynamite and which is thought to be the car used by the "firing squad," has been traced through seven former owners. Pat Gleason, who gave his address as a vacant lot when he took out a license tag, was believed to be the last owner of the car, although he could not be found today.

WE HAVE THE POWER; LET'S USE IT

THE DISPATCH sometime ago called attention to the moves in the present Congress to survey another canal route across Nicaragua, when the Middle West has not yet adjusted itself to the economic and freight changes produced by the Panama canal. If any canal building is to be started, let it be the St. Lawrence waterway and then consider Nicaragua. The Minneapolis Journal, under the caption, "We Have the Power; Let's Use It," says:

The contemplated survey of an interoceanic canal route through Nicaragua does not necessarily betoken early construction, or even ultimate construction. But it does forecast rather certainly that an early Congress will be considering both the feasibility and the desirability of the project. So it may be just as well for the Mississippi Valley and Great Lakes States to begin right now to take cognizance of their own interest in the plan.

The Panama Canal already handicaps inland industry for the benefit of the two Seaboard. Supplementation of the Panama Canal by a new sea level waterway through Nicaragua would add to that handicap, unless present and prospective disadvantages were offset by inland waterways designed to open both the trans-Isthmian and trans-Nicaraguan route to the industries of the interior.

Directly or indirectly interested in adequate water traffic outlets to the North Atlantic, through the St. Lawrence, and to the Gulf of Mexico, through the Mississippi, are twenty-three States. These States are represented in Congress by forty-six United States Senators and two hundred and thirty Representatives—nearly a majority in the Upper House and more than a majority in the Lower House.

So represented, these States can insist that no more Federal money be poured into interoceanic canal projects unless and until waterways and shipping facilities have been developed which will let their own traffic into such canals.

With a solid front, these twenty-three States can demand their own price for a Nicaraguan Canal. They can insist that not a shovelful of dirt be turned on that project, until the St. Lawrence Seaway has been completed, until a nine-foot channel has been provided in the Upper Mississippi, and until barge and tow-boat equipment is ample for all the Valley's needs.

They can demand it, not as a form of blackmail, but as their due. For a St. Lawrence Seaway would make it possible for water borne commerce originating in the Great Lakes States to reach both Seaboard markets, as well as the markets of the world at large. And a properly developed and equipped Mississippi River would make it possible for the water borne commerce of the Valley States, with a single transshipping operation at New Orleans, to reach both Seaboard markets, as well as the markets of the world at large.

Representative Walter H. Newton has been quick to see this opportunity, and has already voiced the demand.

Minnesota and twenty-two other States should insist that Uncle Sam spend no more money on interoceanic canals until Uncle Sam has first made it possible for Minnesota and twenty-two other States to make use of interoceanic canals.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL TEAM

HALF the world may not know the difficulties the Brainerd high school basketball team has had to contend with this season—no adequate or regulation floor space to practice on, the ineligibility jinx, sickness and disability of players, and a hundred and one other things.

We have seen Joe Bush pitch and win a game; we have seen Alaskan dog derbies and other races; but for sheer excitement and go of thrills nothing equalled that game of last night when Brainerd held its own in the first half and then, gathering strength and courage in the last half, defeated Staples 24 to 21.

Staples brought their high school band and the fans filled the entire half side of the armory. They had cheer leaders and a pep chorus, etc. Brainerd had little organized cheering, but whenever a basket or free throw or good play was made, there arose a mighty roar from the Brainerd camp which swallowed up the Staples noise.

Brainerd fans were not boasting. They knew the team would fight squarely to the finish and seek no alibis. The team showed the finest sportsmanship.

When the first quarter ended 7 to 6, with Staples holding the 7 and Brainerd the 6, the Brainerd fans bestirred themselves and came to the conclusion that Brainerd had a team that was coming up from the depths to make a name for itself. The half passed and Brainerd had not cracked. The third quarter Brainerd scored 12 to their opponents' six points and they were clinching victory. Came the last quarter with each team making four points and Brainerd played the same brilliant but cautious game, holding every advantage attained.

Their playing last night gives them entree to the hall of fame of local sports.

THE old adage is "Better Late Than Never." But that does not apply to concerts where Toscanini presides as conductor. New York society, late as usual at any function, probably taking its cue from Mayor Jimmy Walker, was severely reprimanded by Toscanini. No musician can play and no conductor can read a score with ease when constantly interrupted by late arrivals.

LAST fall, out in the Mille Lacs lake district, we noticed a Twin Cities butcher shop on wheels, retailing sirloin steaks and pork chops to lake dwellers. This itinerant style of peddling does not help the home merchant of Brainerd and Crow Wing county.

FAST driving these days is not advisable. The roads are icy in many places. Passing another car at high speed is the height of foolishness, for should you sheer from your course a collision is inevitable.

THE bill regarding old age pensions is not mandatory, but leaves it to the county to adopt or not, as it sees fit. A referendum of the voters of a county decides on the course to take.

WE hope the legislature passes a law requiring every vehicle to carry a light at night. There are too many hayracks, tractors, sleds, etc., on the roads minus a light of any kind.

AT the game law hearing Thursday evening, held at the State Capitol, the duck pass and the one buck law had their proponents and opponents.

Congress Urged To Save U. S. From Grasp of Dope

Boys and Girls Enmeshed In Tentacles of Vicious Drug Habit

"RUINATION for a filthy pittance. What cares the drug peddler for the rosy bloom and promise of youth? Nothing! He is interested only in his fabulous, ill-gotten gains."

The plea came from Mrs. Florence Kahn, Congresswoman from California, in urging that the House promptly adopt the LaGuardia-Wheeler resolution for a Congressional narcotics investigation.

The measure passed the Senate unanimously and is now before the House Rules Committee for a report. Representative Snell, Republican of New York, chairman, promised the committee would consider the question, but no date was set for a hearing. Unless action is prompt the resolution may be lost in the last-minute legislative jam that threatens Congress before adjournment.

"No greater menace confronts any people than drug addiction," said Mrs. Kahn. "Reports from all over the country indicate that addiction is prevalent in all walks of life. Through drugs the criminal classes are stimulated with false courage that enables them to commit the most atrocious crimes. Among people of intellect and wealth and leadership the use of drugs has become an all too frequent occurrence.

"Pitiful are the stories of young boys and girls enmeshed in the tentacles of this most vicious and diabolical habit. Once a slave to the habit, they sink rapidly down the moral scale into degradation, misery and oblivion."

"We must choke this dope monster ere we are engulfed and our boys and girls, in whom the future of the nation rests, are debauched and ruined."

HOPPING OFF FOR "J" HOP

Times and the elements of romance have indeed changed, as witness John Johnson, above, junior at the University of Michigan, about to enter airplane with Miss Bernadine Kern, whom he is taking from Chicago to Ann Arbor by air for the "J" hop, junior class ball.

Representative Walter H. Newton has been quick to see this opportunity, and has already voiced the demand.

Minnesota and twenty-two other States should insist that Uncle Sam spend no more money on interoceanic canals until Uncle Sam has first made it possible for Minnesota and twenty-two other States to make use of interoceanic canals.

OUR HIGH SCHOOL BASKETBALL TEAM

HALF the world may not know the difficulties the Brainerd high school basketball team has had to contend with this season—no adequate or regulation floor space to practice on, the ineligibility jinx, sickness and disability of players, and a hundred and one other things.

We have seen Joe Bush pitch and win a game; we have seen Alaskan dog derbies and other races; but for sheer excitement and gobs of thrills nothing equalled that game of last night when Brainerd held its own in the first half and then, gathering strength and courage in the last half, defeated Staples 24 to 21.

Staples brought their high school band and the fans filled the entire half side of the armory. They had cheer leaders and a pep chorus, etc. Brainerd had little organized cheering, but whenever a basket or free throw or good play was made, there arose a mighty roar from the Brainerd camp which swallowed up the Staples noise.

Brainerd fans were not boasting. They knew the team would fight squarely to the finish and seek no alibis. The team showed the finest sportsmanship.

When the first quarter ended 7 to 6, with Staples holding the 7 and Brainerd the 6, the Brainerd fans bestirred themselves and came to the conclusion that Brainerd had a team that was coming up from the depths to make a name for itself. The half passed and Brainerd had not cracked. The third quarter Brainerd scored 12 to their opponents' six points and they were clinching victory. Came the last quarter with each team making four points and Brainerd played the same brilliant but cautious game, holding every advantage attained.

Their playing last night gives them entree to the hall of fame of local sports.

THE old adage is "Better Late Than Never." But that does not apply to concerts where Toscanini presides as conductor. New York society, late as usual at any function, probably taking its cue from Mayor Jimmy Walker, was severely reprimanded by Toscanini. No musician can play and no conductor can read a score with ease when constantly interrupted by late arrivals.

LAST fall, out in the Mille Lacs lake district, we noticed a Twin Cities butcher shop on wheels, retailing sirloin steaks and pork chops to lake dwellers. This itinerant style of peddling does not help the home merchant of Brainerd and Crow Wing county.

FAST driving these days is not advisable. The roads are icy in many places. Passing another car at high speed is the height of foolishness, for should you sheer from your course a collision is inevitable.

THE bill regarding old age pensions is not mandatory, but leaves it to the county to adopt or not, as it sees fit. A referendum of the voters of a county decides on the course to take.

WE hope the legislature passes a law requiring every vehicle to carry a light at night. There are too many hayracks, tractors, sleds, etc., on the roads minus a light of any kind.

AT the game law hearing Thursday evening, held at the State Capitol, the duck pass and the one buck law had their proponents and opponents.

Congress Urged To Save U. S. From Grasp of Dope

Boys and Girls Enmeshed In Tentacles of Vicious Drug Habit

"RUINATION for a filthy pittance. What cares the drug peddler for the rosy bloom and promise of youth? Nothing! He is interested only in his fabulous, ill-gotten gains."

The plea came from Mrs. Florence Kahn, Congresswoman from California, in urging that the House promptly adopt the LaGuardia-Wheeler resolution for a Congressional narcotics investigation.

The measure passed the Senate unanimously and is now before the House Rules Committee for a report. Representative Snell, Republican of New York, chairman, promised the committee would consider the question, but no date was set for a hearing. Unless action is prompt the resolution may be lost in the last-minute legislative jam that threatens Congress before adjournment.

"No greater menace confronts any people than drug addiction," said Mrs. Kahn. "Reports from all over the country indicate that addiction is prevalent in all walks of life. Through drugs the criminal classes are stimulated with false courage that enables them to commit the most atrocious crimes. Among people of intellect and wealth and leadership the use of drugs has become an all too frequent occurrence.

"Pitiful are the stories of young boys and girls enmeshed in the tentacles of this most vicious and diabolical habit. Once a slave to the habit, they sink rapidly down the moral scale into degradation, misery and oblivion."

"We must choke this dope monster ere we are engulfed and our boys and girls, in whom the future of the nation rests, are debauched and ruined."

HOPPING OFF FOR "J" HOP

Times and the elements of romance have indeed changed, as witness John Johnson, above, junior at the University of Michigan, about to enter airplane with Miss Bernadine Kern, whom he is taking from Chicago to Ann Arbor by air for the "J" hop, junior class ball.

BRAINERD HIGH PLAYS CROSBY-IRONTON IN FINALS TONIGHT

ALL BRAINERD TO TRAVEL TO RANGE TOWN

IN THRILLING GAME LAST NIGHT
BRAINERD DEFEATED
STAPLES 24-21

BRAINERD OVERCOMES LEAD
AGAINST THEM IN FIRST HALF

By CLARENCE E. DAHLEN
Everybody in Brainerd able to go to the Crosby-Ironton Armory will be there tonight to see the sweetest, gamiest team in the world attempt what was generally supposed the impossible a few days ago—capture the district tournament.

Two ancient rivals of this county, the Crosby-Ironton high school and the Brainerd high school will fight with every ounce of strength in their supple bodies for the district basketball championship.

The game will get under way at 8 o'clock sharp. The bird who manages to be there at least one hour early will get a seat.

Sweet baby—that was a game last night. In black and white, the outstanding event of the day yesterday for this city was that Brainerd defeated Staples by the score of 24 to 21 in the most thrilling game ever witnessed in this district.

That score means everything. In it is mirrored forty minutes of play that was a whiz, a basketball game that kept 900 fans on the edges of their seats or on their toes.

Playing championship style basketball in a phenomenal manner, the Brainerd team which this year was without a home practice floor, went through that game in scintillating style, overcame a lead against them in the first half and flashed through to victory in the last half.

Everybody but the janitor chased Frank Wise around that armory floor last evening. The Staples' fleet-footed guards chased him to all positions of the floor, the forwards attempted to stop him, the Brainerd players chased him, and the referee ran himself ragged in attempting to keep the pace. It couldn't be done. Wise was in a class by himself on that floor. That game will flash out as outstanding in his notable basketball career. He was most certainly the downfall of the Staples team, the player who sent hundreds of Staples fans back to their home town sorrowing and an equal number of Brainerd fans back home hugging themselves.

From the opening whistle to the closing gun Mr. Wise was in the center of the fray. His able team mates handed him the reins and he proceeded to bring them through that game to victory. It was so cleverly done that Staples is still flabbergasted as to how it was done.

The game stamped Frank as a tournament player and with his enviable career as a cage man through four years of high school basketball marks him as one of the outstanding players in Brainerd's history.

But there were five other boys from this city who also deserve the congratulations of ma, pa, brother and sister—five boys who fought with a determination to the last for the glory of the school and Brainerd.

Faking, pivoting and maneuvering on the floor by Art Hautala contributed much to Staples' downfall, causing the guards worry from the initial whistle. Fuller played a real defensive game. He covered the flashy little Greene in real fashion besides taking part in Brainerd's offense, making possible many a score.

Gabiau played a game that was typical of his best. He also was very heady and steady in dribbling down the floor and sizing up the opponents' flaws.

Ray Paine jumped at center and dropped back to guard. The fans will appreciate his work all the more when they realize that this was his first game in that position. This means that he stepped into a championship game in a different position for the first time and came through in very brilliant shape. It was Paine who took care of Johnson, Staples' star center, in as good a way as he has been taken care of this year.

Time after time he got the ball off the backboard, preventing Staples from following the ball in.

It was the changing of Paine, Fuller and Wise in positions that checked the Staples' offense, leaving them out of position on the defense.

Poster, who came in when Gabiau was taken out on four personals contributed his share in holding the Staples score down. There was need for him in the game and when the need came he fulfilled it.

The following are playing in their last high school tournament: Wise, Fuller, Gabiau, Paine and Goedertz. Art Hautala, Foster and Schuetz, the other members of the tournament squad are left over.

have been on the tournament squad had it not been for sickness, are also seniors. Guin and Dyvik, two men who have been kept out because of injuries and sickness, will be left for next year.

Coach Warren Kasch put much concentrated thought in preparation for the Staples game last night. The rearranging of his offense and his defense and the changing of his men on both offense and defense can be attributed to Brainerd's victory.

This is typical of his preparation for each important game. Close study of play by opponents and the men themselves plus psychology is a rule followed by Mr. Kasch in preparing his men for major encounters.

Hautala sank four field goals and three free throws to lead the field in scoring. Wise came through with two field goals and one free throw. Gabiau sank two field goals. Paine got a field basket and free throw, and Fuller found the loop for a free throw. Foster came in to relieve Gabiau after the latter had been taken out near the close of the game on personal fouls after having played a near perfect game at guard position.

Two of the Staples men were taken from the game on personal fouls, Nurnberger and Greene.

Referee Lewis called 'em mighty close, too close. However, he checked the speed of the teams only for brief intervals.

Brainerd might have won the game on personal fouls but this angle was neglected by the men as they concentrated on winning from the field positions.

The locals had 21 chances to sink free throws but only netted six.

Kenneburger was high point man or Staples with three field goals and two free throws.

The Brainerd team in action resembled the team of 1928 that eliminated Crosby-Ironton at the finals in such thrilling style, winning in overtime play.

Wise's floor dribbling was on a par with his excellent showing in hat game.

Staples led by 7 to 6 at the quarter, increased its lead by 11 to 8 in the second, but was unable to hold the pace in the third quarter, trailing Brainerd 20 to 17 at the close of the third, and partly cracked under the strain in the closing quarter.

The Brainerd team that met Staples was as different from the one that defeated Wadena Thursday afternoon as night and day. The opening game found the locals uncertain of themselves, groping their way through for an opening. Last night the home boys took the situation in hand at the start and kept the grilling pace to the last.

Brainerd will win the championship if it can display the same form tonight. Otherwise the game might be conceded to Crosby-Ironton, for he range team knows basketball.

Crosby-Ironton will enter the game tonight as favorites to win. The team is as fresh as when it entered the tournament. The players were not forced to extend themselves in the Aitkin or Little Falls games.

END COMES IN SECOND ROUND AT THE GARDEN

TOUGHEST FIGHTERS IN
LIGHTWEIGHT RANKS

McLARNIN'S NEXT MATCH UNDER PROMOTION OF JACK
DEMPSEY

New York, March 2.—(U.P.)—Jimmy McLarnin, baby faced Vancouver, B. C., boy who has grown from a flyweight to a junior welter weight in a few years, today had another knockout to his credit over one of the toughest fighters in the lightweight ranks.

The western Irish lad knocked out Joe Glick, Brooklyn tailor, after one minute, 37 seconds of fighting in the second round of a scheduled ten round bout in Madison Square Garden last night.

Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager, told the United Press today that the Irish boy's next match might be under the promotion of Jack Dempsey in a big outdoor fight at Detroit or in Florida. No opponent has been discussed.

It was the third sensational knockout McLarnin has scored in New York, having stopped Sid Terris and Phil McGraw, other prominent lightweights, in one round each.

Glick made a poor showing against the Vancouver boy. He came out in the second round, bleeding from the nose and mouth, went down for a count of nine and then down to stay after a barrage of rights and lefts to the head.

EIGHT BIG TEN CAGE TEAMS IN ACTION TONIGHT

PLAY MAY CINCH 1929 CHAM-PIONSHIP FOR WISCONSIN
TEAM

DEFEAT FOR WOLVERINES PRACTI-CALLY WILL PUT THEM OUT OF RUNNING

Chicago, March 2.—(U.P.)—Eight Big Ten basketball teams see action tonight, with the possibility that the play may virtually cinch the 1929 championship for Wisconsin.

Although the conference leading Badgers are idle, the schedule brings into action Michigan, the one team with a chance of beating out Wisconsin, and a defeat for the Wolverines practically will put them out of the running.

Michigan is faced with the task of winning from Ohio, a team which has won three of its last four games. The Ohioans will have the home floor advantage and if they continue at their present pace the Wolverines will encounter a hard problem.

Purdue, which still has a mathematical possibility to tie for the championship, meets Illinois and should win but it is extremely unlikely that the Boilermakers will come in for even a share of the title.

Wisconsin now has won nine games and lost only one, as compared with the eight won and two lost standing of Michigan. If Michigan should win tonight, the Wolverines will go into their final games with a nine won and two lost standing.

If Michigan should win from the Badgers the Wolverines will take a temporary lead with ten won and two lost but Wisconsin is almost a cinch to tie that with a victory in its final game against Chicago at Madison.

In order for Purdue to win a share in the title, the Boilermakers must win all remaining games while Wisconsin is losing, two and Michigan one—an unlikely supposition.

In the other two games tonight, Northwestern plays at Iowa and Chicago meets Minnesota at Minneapolis.

A. FOX MUSHES WAY TO VICTORY

Albin Fox, West Brainerd boy, mushed his way in perfect north woods style this afternoon to win the single dog and team dog finals of the annual derby sponsored by the local post of the American Legion.

It was Fox's second championship in two years, he having driven his dog past the tape first in last year's event.

The races this afternoon were run off on Seventh street south and were witnessed by hundreds of spectators.

Harry Hicks was a close second in the single dog event. Dale Bourgeois was clicked for third place.

Don Spencer came in second in the two-dog finals close behind Albin Fox.

Entries who placed in the different events this afternoon in addition to the finalists were: Milton Ebinger, August Austin, Ralph Purdy, Arthur Gallagher, Charles Leighton and Ray Brooks. Thirty derby entries competed.

HEENEY COMEBACK CHECKED; MALONEY OUTPOINTS HIM

Boston, March 2.—(U.P.)—The comeback attempt of Tom Heenev, New Zealand heavyweight, was checked here last night when Jim Maloney, Boston, outpointed him decisively in 10 rounds.

It was Heenev's first fight since Gene Tunney scored a technical knockout over him in New York last July. Although he started strongly and shook Maloney with stiff jabs early in the bout, he was unable to stand up under a steady rain of blows.

Heenev, a year ago, knocked Maloney out in the first round.

Italian Auto Roads

Automobile roads in Italy are known as "autostrada." Autostrada are not a part of the state highway system, but are owned, controlled and operated by private concerns. The state pays an annuity to the operating companies and they are permitted to impose and collect tolls. Eventually the state will own the roads.

Health Hint

A dish of prunes or other stewed fruit at bedtime and a glass or two of water at ordinary temperature on arising will go a long way toward bringing proper elimination after breakfast and keeping the digestion in shape.

By QUIN HALL.
While Herr Max Schmeling is vacationing in Germany the boys over on this side of the briny are still trying to figure just how high he will go in his climb to the throne vacated by Gene Tunney.

He crashed down Johnny Risko, the Cleveland rubber man and baker boy, in the ninth frame of a scheduled ten-round scrap in New York just before he eased himself aboard a steamer headed East, and on that performance he apparently is riding on the crest of a wave. It was the second time in his long and colorful career that the bounding Cleveland had ever been put away. Chuck Wiggins is credited with a K. O. over Johnny, but it is rumored about that Chuck pulled one of the posts from the corner of the ring to turn the trick.

Following the bout Risko stated that he had been hit harder by both Godfrey and Tunney, but he didn't make it clear why neither Godfrey nor Tunney could upset him. That Godfrey bout was a tough spot for Risko. With little to gain by a victory over the big negro, John went in and took a terrific body piling. There are those who contend that this softened up the baker boy to no small degree and that he was due to be bowled over when he went into the ring with the German. These rumors were floated before the bout and not afterward, which eliminates the possibility of their having been alibis.

While Schmeling's victory undoubtedly boosted his stock considerably, the fellows who rest their chins around the squared circle would like to see him in action again before they demand that the Muldoon-Tunney Trophy be handed over to Max without further quibbling.

Max was heralded to the moneyed side of the Atlantic as a second Dempsey. In appearance he is not unlike the Manassa Mauler and in the ring he has the weaving tactics of Dempsey. But while Dempsey weaves and socks, Schmeling for the most part merely weaves. Taken alone, plain or fancy weaving isn't going to get anyone anywhere unless he is manufacturing shawls or mufflers.

Beyond the shadow of a doubt, Herr Max has come a long way in a short time, but how much more progress he can make and how rapidly he can span the intervening distance remains to be seen. Right now he can be figured as one of the heavyweight championship contenders, but there is a pretty good crowd of these fellows if you care to listen to their various managers.

Schmeling is ranked fairly high by the experts in this list of possibilities. While the Hamburg hater has to hook up his swatting more intimately with his weaving, and while he must learn to push an advantage and sustain an attack, he has a stout heart and a concrete chin in his favor, and he has a hefty right hand. Those things are always dangerous to the opposition.

Then, too, Max has youth in his favor. He's 23 years old, having been born at Klein-Lucknow, a small town near Berlin, September 28, 1905. Later his family moved to Hamburg and when he was sixteen, to Berlin. He took up amateur boxing in 1924 and knocked out the middleweight champion of his club at Muehlheim. He remained an amateur for less than a year and before the end of 1924 he won his first professional start, knocking out a fellow named Czapp in four rounds. He went on to win the light-heavyweight title and the German heavyweight championship. In his record are only two knockout defeats. Larry Gaines is credited with one in 1921 when the bout was stopped because Max was ill; and in 1928, Gypsy Daniels, English boxer, K. O'd him in one round at Frankfurt.

Schmeling has the Dempsey weave. Will he develop the other Dempsey qualities and become a second Manassa Mauler?

BRAINERD HIGH PLAYS CROSBY-IRONTON IN FINALS TONIGHT

ALL BRAINERD TO TRAVEL TO RANGE TOWN

IN THRILLING GAME LAST NIGHT
BRAINERD DEFEATED
STAPLES 24-21

BRAINERD OVERCOMES LEAD
AGAINST THEM IN FIRST
HALF

By CLARENCE E. DAHLEN
Everybody in Brainerd able to go to the Crosby-Ironton Armory will be there tonight to see the sweetest, gamiest team in the world attempt what was generally supposed the impossible a few days ago—capture the district tournament.

Two ancient rivals of this county, the Crosby-Ironton high school and the Brainerd high school will fight with every ounce of strength in their supple bodies for the district basketball championship.

The game will get under way at 8 o'clock sharp. The bird who manages to be there at least one hour early will get a seat.

Sweet baby—that was a game last night. In black and white, the outstanding event of the day yesterday for this city was that Brainerd defeated Staples by the score of 24 to 21 in the most thrilling game ever witnessed in this district.

That score means everything. In it is mirrored forty minutes of play that was a whiz, a basketball game that kept 900 fans on the edges of their seats or on their toes.

Playing championship style basketball in a phenomenal manner, the Brainerd team which this year was without a home practice floor, went through that game in scintillating style, overcame a lead against them in the first half and flashed through to victory in the last half.

Everybody but the janitor chased Frank Wise around that armory floor last evening. The Staples' fleet-footed guards chased him to all positions of the floor, the forwards attempted to stop him, the Brainerd players chased him, and the referee ran himself ragged in attempting to keep the pace. It couldn't be done. Wise was in a class by himself on that floor. That game will flash out as outstanding in his notable basketball career. He was most certainly the downfall of the Staples team, the player who sent hundreds of Staples fans back to their home town sorrowing and an equal number of Brainerd fans back home hugging themselves.

From the opening whistle to the closing gun Mr. Wise was in the center of the fray. His able team mates handed him the reins and he proceeded to bring them through that game to victory. It was so cleverly done that Staples is still flabbergasted as to how it was done.

The game stamped Frank as a tournament player and with his enviable career as a cage man through four years of high school basketball marks him as one of the outstanding players in Brainerd's history.

But there were five other boys from this city who also deserve the congratulations of ma, pa, brother and sister—five boys who fought with a determination to the last for the glory of the school and Brainerd.

Faking, pivoting and maneuvering on the floor by Art Hautala contributed much to Staples' downfall, causing the guards worry from the initial whistle. Fuller played a real defensive game. He covered the flashy little Greeno in real fashion besides taking part in Brainerd's offense, making possible many a score. Gabiou played a game that was typical of his best. He also was very heady and steady in dribbling down the floor and sizing up the opponents' flaws.

Ray Paine jumped at center and dropped back to guard. The fans will appreciate his work all the more when they realize that this was his first game in that position. This means that he stepped into a championship game in a different position for the first time and came through in very brilliant shape. It was Paine who took care of Johnson, Staples' star center, in as good a way as he has been taken care of this year.

Time after time he got the ball off the backboard, preventing Staples from following the ball in.

It was the changing of Paine, Fuller and Wise in positions that checked the Staples' offense, leaving them out of position on the defense.

Poster, who came in when Gabiou was taken out on four personals contributed his share in holding the Staples score down. There was need for him in the game and when the need came he fulfilled it.

The following are playing in their last high school tournament: Wise, Fuller, Gabiou, Paine and Goedderz.

have been on the tournament squad had it not been for sickness, are also seniors. Guin and Dybvik, two men who have been kept out because of injuries and sickness, will be left for next year.

Coch Warren Kasch put much concentrated thought in preparation for the Staples game last night. The rearranging of his offense and his defense and the changing of his men on both offense and defense can be attributed to Brainerd's victory.

This is typical of his preparation for each important game. Close study of play by opponents and the men themselves plus psychology is a rule followed by Mr. Kasch in preparing his men for major encounters.

Hautala sank four field goals and three free throws to lead the field in scoring. Wise came through with two field goals and one free throw. Gabiou sank two field goals, Paine got a field basket and free throw, and Fuller found the loop for a free throw. Foster came in to relieve Gabiou after the latter had been taken out near the close of the game on personal fouls after having played a near perfect game at guard position.

Two of the Staples men were taken from the game on personal fouls, Nurnberger and Greeno.

Referee Lewis called 'em mighty close, too close. However, he checked the speed of the teams only for brief intervals.

Brainerd might have won the game on personal fouls but this angle was neglected by the men as they concentrated on winning from the field positions.

The locals had 21 chances to sink free throws but only netted six.

Kenneburger was high point man or Staples with three field goals and two free throws.

The Brainerd team in action resembled the team of 1928 that eliminated Crosby-Ironton at the finals in such thrilling style, winning in vertime play.

Wise's floor dribbling was on a par with his excellent showing in hat game.

Staples led by 7 to 6 at the quarter, increased its lead by 11 to 8 in the second, but was unable to hold its pace in the third quarter, trailing Brainerd 20 to 17 at the close of the third, and partly cracked under the strain in the closing quarter.

The Brainerd team that met Staples was as different from the one that defeated Wadena Thursday afternoon as night and day. The opening game found the locals uncertain of themselves, groping their way through for an opening. Last night the home boys took the situation in hand at the start and kept he grilling pace to the last.

Brainerd will win the championship if it can display the same form tonight. Otherwise the game might be conceded to Crosby-Ironton, for he range team knows basketball.

Crosby-Ironton will enter the game tonight as favorites to win. The cam is as fresh as when it entered the tournament. The players were forced to extend themselves in the Aitkin or Little Falls games.

TOUGHEST FIGHTERS IN
LIGHTWEIGHT RANKS

McLARNIN'S NEXT MATCH UNDER PROMOTION OF JACK DEMPSEY

New York, March 2.—(U.P.)—Jimmy McLarnin, baby faced Vancouver, B. C., boy who has grown from a flyweight to a junior welter weight in a few years, today had another knockout to his credit over one of the toughest fighters in the lightweight ranks.

The western Irish lad knocked out Joe Glick, Brooklyn tailor, after one minute, 37 seconds of fighting in the second round of a scheduled ten round bout in Madison Square Garden last night.

Pop Foster, McLarnin's manager, told the United Press today that the Irish boy's next match might be under the promotion of Jack Dempsey in a big outdoor fight at Detroit or in Florida. No opponent has been discussed.

It was the third sensational knockout McLarnin has scored in New York, having stopped Sid Terris and Phil McGraw, other prominent lightweights, in one round each.

Glick made a poor showing against the Vancouver boy. He came out in the second round, bleeding from the nose and mouth, went down for a count of nine and then down to stay after a barrage of rights and lefts to the head.

EIGHT BIG TEN CAGE TEAMS IN ACTION TONIGHT

PLAY MAY CINCH 1929 CHAMPIONSHIP FOR WISCONSIN TEAM

DEFEAT FOR WOLVERINES PRACTICALLY WILL PUT THEM OUT OF RUNNING

Chicago, March 2.—(U.P.)—Eight Big Ten basketball teams see action tonight, with the possibility that the play may virtually cinch the 1929 championship for Wisconsin.

Although the conference leading Badgers are idle, the schedule brings into action Michigan, the one team with a chance of beating out Wisconsin, and a defeat for the Wolverines practically will put them out of the running.

Michigan is faced with the task of winning from Ohio, a team which has won three of its last four games. The Ohicans will have the home floor advantage and if they continue at their present pace the Wolverines will encounter a hard problem.

Purdue, which still has a mathematical possibility to tie for the championship, meets Illinois and should win but it is extremely unlikely that the Boilermakers will come in for even a share of the title.

Wisconsin now has won nine games and lost only one, as compared with the eight won and two lost standing of Michigan. If Michigan should win tonight, the Wolverines will go into their final games with a nine won and two lost standing.

If Michigan should win from the Badgers the Wolverines will take a temporary lead with ten won and two lost but Wisconsin is almost a cinch to tie that with a victory in its final game against Chicago at Madison.

In order for Purdue to win a share in the title, the Boilermakers must win all remaining games while Wisconsin is losing, two and Michigan is one—an unlikely supposition.

In the other two games tonight, Northwestern plays at Iowa and Chicago meets Minnesota at Minneapolis.

A. FOX MUSHES WAY TO VICTORY

Albin Fox, West Brainerd boy, mushed his way in perfect north woods style this afternoon to win the single dog and team dog finals of the annual derby sponsored by the local post of the American Legion.

It was Fox's second championship in two years, he having driven his dog past the tape first in last year's event.

The races this afternoon were run off on Seventh street south and were witnessed by hundreds of spectators.

Harry Hicks was a close second in the single dog event. Dale Bourgeois was clicked for third place.

Don Spencer came in second in the two-dog finals close behind Albin Fox.

Entries who placed in the different events this afternoon in addition to the finalists were: Milton Ebinger, August Austin, Ralph Purdy, Arthur Gallagher, Charles Leighton and Ray Brooks. Thirty derby entries competed.

HEENEY COMEBACK CHECKED; MALONEY OUTPOINTS HIM

Boston, March 2.—(U.P.)—The comeback attempt of Tom Heenev, New Zealand heavyweight, was checked here last night when Jim Maloney, Boston, outpointed him decisively in 10 rounds.

It was Heenev's first fight since Gene Tunney scored a technical knockout over him in New York last July. Although he started strongly and shook Maloney with stiff jabs early in the bout, he was unable to stand up under a steady rain of blows.

Heenev, a year ago, knocked Maloney out in the first round.

WRESTLING AND BOXING CARD SPONSORED BY AMERICAN LEGION AT MEETING

LOCAL MAT ARTISTS TO PERFORM IN IRON EXCHANGE HALL; LUNCH FOLLOWS

As part of the program at the American Legion meeting here Monday night the sports committee will present a local wrestling and boxing card.

The program to be given in the Iron Exchange hall will start at 8 o'clock and will be followed by lunch and cards.

Included on the sports card will be wrestling matches by Clarence Carlson vs. Louie Roddal, Al Evans vs. Mayo, a boxing bout between Joe Daniels and Mark Patterson. Bill Heikkila will box an opponent who will be secured later today.

Johnny Beck, well known wrestler, will give an exhibition of mat work demonstrating the various holds.

13,000 MEN TO COMPETE IN 28TH BOWLING CONGRESS

Chicago, March 2.—(U.P.)—Approximately 13,000 men will compete in the twenty-eighth annual American Bowling congress, which begins here this afternoon and continues for five weeks.

The tournament has the largest entry list of its history and will bring into action 2,523 five men teams from all sections of the country. Play will be over 32 alleys, especially constructed for the event.

The prize list totals $107,770, which is two-thirds of the $161,690 collected as entry fees.

Italian Auto Roads

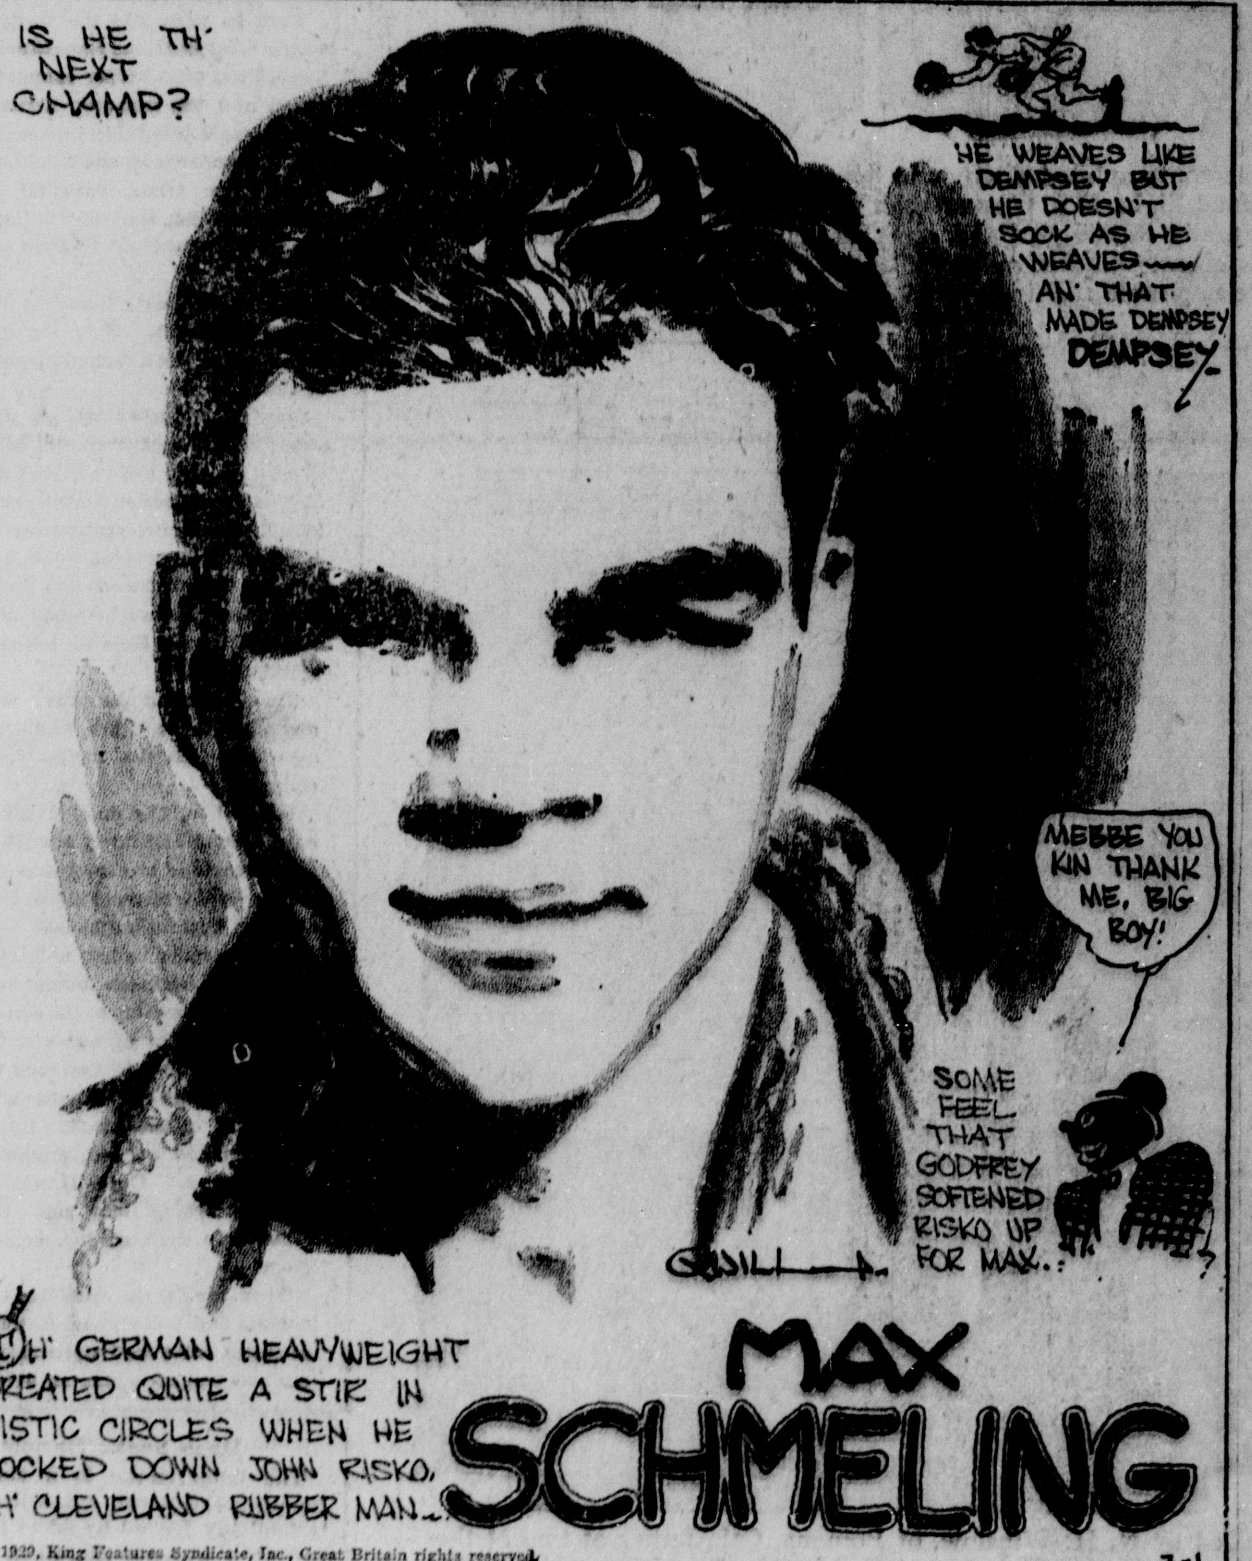

Automobile roads in Italy are known as "autostrada." Autostrada are not a part of the state highway system, but are owned, controlled and operated by private concerns. The state pays an annuity to the operating companies and they are permitted to impose and collect tolls. Eventually the state will own the roads.

The name "mince pies" was invented by the Puritans in Colonial days as they objected to the name "Christmas pies." Under the name "mutton pies," similar pies were known in England as early as 1596. When Hawks Swooped Out of the West

To a New Coast-to-Coast Non-Stop Record

Bright noon at Roosevelt Field! Gradually a slight clouding in the West and the February sun became a little bleaker. The flat, level field with some standing water from yesterday's rain and the faint, hazy outlines of the spires of Garden City, looked to one observer, like a small bit of old Holland, except for the intermittent roar and zoom of airplanes and the group of people standing in the lee of a distinctively American institution, a hot dog stand.

Clustered near this stand, the small groups conversed quietly about sundry matters, but the frequent shifting of glances to the West betrayed where every man's thoughts were.

Occasionally, someone would stop, peer and exclaim "Here he comes now!"

"No."

"Yes."

"No—that's a biplane."

Then again, "This looks like him."

"No, it can't be, they wired that his ship has a red fuselage and aluminum wings."

Several such false starts made a few scurrying out to their posts by the photographers and movie news reel men. Then, as the hands of the clock nearly touched three, there was a little dot in sight—due west—nearer it came, like a homing dove, like a bullet. This must be Hawks. It was!

Past us with a roar. Then over he went, throwing the plane into a vertical bank, a shaft of sunlight striking the aluminum wings and turning them to silver. Around it came like a joy-maddened creature—twice, in huge, tearing circles around the field, thrilling the group below. This was the real thing! From then on, all other planes seemed stodgy and dwarfed. This Lockheed had authority. The flash of it around the field seemed to those who knew it as Frank Hawks' aerial signature, the certain verve of it, a flourish like the famous signature of John Hancock on the "Declaration"—unmistakable!

Back he went into the West again and then at a flat slant, the plane came to ground. The official time-keeper snapped his stopwatch and the non-stop Coast to Coast record was comfortably broken.

There were cheers and a mad rush to surround the trim, beautiful Lockheed. Hardly heeding the yet-whirling propeller the crowd surged out to greet and acclaim Hawks.

Hawks sat nearly immobile in the little exposed cockpit. Only the flash of his strong white teeth showed his consciousness of victory.

Slowly he pushed up his goggles and stretched his back and neck muscles very like a man who has been slightly stiffened from falling asleep in a Pullman chair. He looked about him, recognizing among the small sea of faces those whom he knew, his wife, his Texaco friends and Bill Brock and some other famous fliers who had journeyed out to Roosevelt Field to welcome and congratulate him.

Then up came the heavy artillery, the news photographers, camera men and reporters. Hawks modestly, graciously obliged.

Meanwhile, the door of the cabin had been opened and fairly stumbling into the arms of some of the spectators emerged the partner of this intrepid flight, Oscar Grubb, able and faithful mechanic.

Small wonder he had no ears for the applause—for eighteen hours he had been confined in the cabin at the non-spectacular, but nevertheless necessary task of pumping gasoline up into the wing tanks. But soon, the strain of the flight and the numbing effects of the gasoline fumes dropped from him and he, too, grinned with pride and pleasure. Capt. Hawks grasped his hand, dragging him into the line of cameras so that he, too, could share the glory.

Then, amidst the clamoring of autograph hunters and well-wishers, Hawks doffed the room-skin coat and appearing in a light business suit so unlike an aviator, walked into the shack where the reporters were assembled.

In the warmth of this little room, Hawks' hearing, impaired by the eighteen hours exposure to terrific speed, biting cold and the incessant roar of the exhaust, was restored. In a frank, friendly manner he answered the questions of the eager press men—and what a story they were able to put on the wires to greet at their breakfast tables millions of newspaper readers.

Breaking the record, that was not all he did. He showed to the world, almost unconsciously, the triumph of a skilled and gallant pilot over the adverse forces of nature. Encompassed by snow, fog, sleet and darkness, he flew "blind" for nearly twelve hours, through the clouds, and over the clouds, skimming close to the hills at times and over 14,000 feet up at other times.

"I kept my eye on the compass and tried to stay on the course." At Roswell, New Mexico, we encountered fog and clouds, the next sight of land we got was after eight this morning."

The story was drawn from him by apt questions.

How he had found the weather too bad to go over the mountain somewhere in West Virginia.

How he had to lose time by turning back to find a better route.

How he battled rain and snow.

How he recognized a railroad in Pennsylvania and then later small settlements in New Jersey.

Then, when the danger of flying out over the cold gray Atlantic was past, how he opened up the throttle.

We know the rest.

How at better than 200 miles per hour he swung those wild jubilant circles around Roosevelt Field.

Over near the window, an official opened the barograph, handled it carefully so as not to disturb the delicate tracings on the smoked recording cylinder. He let out a low whistle of astonishment, for there was the recording of the up-and-down battle through the night, the peaks and valleys of a jagged line that showed graphically how Hawks had been looking for holes through the clouds at elevations sometimes 2½ miles high.

Surrounded by a still curious crowd, the plane rested in the afternoon sun. An officer climbed up to measure the gasoline left—over 50 gallons still remained. A sample of the oil was drained and later great satisfaction was expressed at its fine condition.

Hawks was delighted with the performance of the engine. He gave much of the credit to the fuel and lubricant. He said "My engine functioned perfectly thanks to Texaco." Of course, he used Texaco Aviation Gasoline and Texaco Airplane Oil.

Later, the plane was taken to the Aviation Show at Grand Central Palace, New York. Thousands of people viewed it, reading on the fuselage over the Texaco trademark a sign: "In this plane Capt. Frank M. Hawks battled fog, snow and sleet to break the Coast to Coast Non-Stop Record. He used Texaco Aviation Gasoline and Texaco Airplane Oil."

Pilots from all over the country expressed surprise that the flight could have been made at all at this time of the year to say nothing of breaking the record.

Many spectators wondered how Oscar Grubb "the human sardine" as some called him, could have spent the night cramped in among the 75 five-gallon cans of Texaco Aviation Gasoline and Texaco Airplane Oil, not knowing where he was as regards to altitude or latitude. Tirelessly he worked the "wobble" pump, fighting off fatigue and gasoline fumes to help the gallant Captain to a victory that he even now is dreaming of surpassing.

Grubb says he would be willing to do it all over again—provided Frank Hawks was at the controls.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR.

WHEN Irene Robeline married Guinn Holden, the young and handsome Texas minister, she expected to win his love. Guinn, a year before, had married the beautiful blonde Lilith, a gay and coquettish girl, who boasted of her ability to win him. Lilith died at childbirth. For eighteen years Irene fought a secret battle to root out the "gold and white" ghost of Guinn's first wife. She slaved in the household on the slender salary of the preacher. She was a splendid mother to the second Lilith, who grew up with all the beauty of the first as well as a cold, selfish, spoiled character. Tina, Ross, Lundy and Patricia, Irene's children, were always secondary to Lilith with Holden. Tina wore her cast-off clothes and used her old books in college. After graduation Lilith became engaged to Roger Devereaux, son of wealthy parents. Later she postponed her marriage and persuaded her father to give her a year in New York studying voice with the $2,000 left him by a parishioner. She was ecstatically happy in the big city, especially after meeting Vivien Winthrop, who entertained her in her palatial home. Bill Chester, heir to millions, and engaged to an heiress, is attracted to Lilith, whose beauty is ravishing. Back home Tina is graduating from college and Irene suffers utmost humiliation when Guinn fails to give her a graduation present. Later Tina has a house party. Sheba, the colored cook, tells Roger Devereaux he has a "hoodoo." Dan Ripley, rich, young, handsome, returned from a trip, spends time with Tina, who works at her drawing and helps at home. Irene discovers that Tina is in love with Dan. Lilith, in New York, makes plans for spending the summer alone. She goes out often with Bill Chester. They speak of their engagements. Lilith pictures herself with Bill's riches.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CHAPTER XLII.

GUINN rubbed his chin reflectively, casting about his mind for arguments that would deceive this shrewd woman, but her clear eyes gazed at him so searchingly that in the end he took refuge in the truth.

"She doesn't want to come home now, Irene, and I don't want to make her do what she would hate."

"You induce Lilith to her hurt, Guinn. She takes advantage of you at every turn."

"Oh, if only he could see into her own heart as she saw into his!"

If only he could realize that she loved him utterly, and in all things wanted his own best good, and that of the children, his Lilith's as well as her own! Men were so glib, and Guinn was so guileless that a designing woman, even his daughter, could hoodwink him. He stiffened under her intent look. "I promised the child a year in New York, and I must keep my word. When she's finished out this pleasure year as she calls it, then she'll face responsibilities. Don't worry."

Because he felt uncomfortable and uncertain of the wisdom of his course, he spoke abruptly, to convince himself as much as her.

She gave a deep sigh. "If Lilith has her way up your mind for you, Guinn, there's no use in saying anything further. But this is utterly against my judgment."

"I'll take the responsibility." He turned abruptly away. He strode out toward the garage, and in a moment he heard his old car chugging away down the street.

She gazed across the lawn, her hands idle in her lap, their darning forgotten. Lundy was cutting the grass, his machine whirring like a big green beetle as it scuttled over the ground, his black hair pushed back from his perspiring forehead, his eyes fixed with intensity on the strip of lawn straight before him. The warm air was perfumed with roses, the climbing Marechal Niel over the porch, the tall La Frances with their nodding heads, the white Kaiserin Augusta Victorias by the dining room, and all her other roses that she loved and tended—but suddenly they seemed worthless now. Why bother with beauty when life lacked love?

Her hands clenched and unclenched slowly. Lundy looked up from his task. "Am I makin' a good job of this, Mother?"

"Yes, dear; a good job," she said, and managed a smile for him.

How could Guinn treat her so? Was she nothing to him but a drudge in his house? Her days passed in procession before her mind.

Then her lip curled in scorn at herself for her self-pity. She jabbed a needle through Guinn's silk sock, laid it in her mending basket, and went into the house to the telephone.

"Miss Mattie, I want to run away to the country for a couple of days to rest, and take Tina with me. Will you come over and stay with Pat?"

"Sure. Have you sent for the undertaker? I know you're dying if you are willing to rest."

Next she called up Will Lundy. "Will you drive me and Tina out to Miss Betty Coleman's?"

"Be right over," he said.

She made the briefest explanation to Pat and to Sheba, and was ready to be gone before Guinn could have time to come back.

"Wouldn't it be better to take Pat with you and leave me look after father?" Tina demurred.

"No." She would let Guinn experience a couple of days without the attention of his wife or thoughtful daughter. Pat would be a liability to him instead of an asset, and Miss Mattie had prejudices against pampering any man, even the preacher, while Sheba agreed with her.

Miss Betty Coleman, who was seventy-five, a friend of Irene's mother, twittered with delight at seeing her, and her antique servants were as pleased as she. Irene lay down in a cool south room, with the shutters drawn to keep out the heat and glare, with a restful sigh to think that no doorbell or telephone could jerk her to action. Miss Betty Coleman had no telephone.

Guinn wrote his letter to Lilith, saying she might stay, and posted it at once. Then he made pastoral calls all the morning, and came home late to dinner. He had the guilty feeling of a husband late to a meal and the uneasy unrest of one who has done a rash thing. He didn't wish to see his wife just then, but it was his custom to come home to dinner in the middle of the day, so his masculine dignity forbade an obvious evasion.

He was momentarily relieved to find that Irene had gone to the country, but a brief period of reflection brought him surprise over her departure and a resentment that was illogical even to him. Pat sulked because she had been left out of the trip, Sheba was ironing in a state of hostile indifference to a man's comfort, and Miss Mattie clacked away, chiefly about how Irene overworked. Why in thunder did Irene have to wish her on him?

As soon as dinner was over, Pat scampered over to a neighbor's to play, thus leaving her father at the mercy of the telephone, from which his thoughtful womenfolk usually shielded him. As a general thing Irene took his calls for him and tempered their demands as best she could, while Tina sang any numbers that he wished and relayed messages for him.

Man-like, he felt his own discomfort first, a rebellion that he couldn't decide a matter with regard to his own child without upsetting the household. And then, because he was in most respects a just man, he began to see Irene's side of this affair. Perhaps he had acted hastily. Women liked to be consulted about things, even if you didn't take their advice. And

Irene's judgment was usually good, better than his own, in fact. He allowed her a free hand with the other children—but Lilith was different. His mind wandered off to Lilith in New York, and even the thought of her brought to him the subtle fascination she exerted over him. Shut in his bedroom to get away from Miss Mattie (he might have to barriade himself in the bathroom next to escape the clatter tongue!) he gazed out over the treetops toward the distant blue, and indulged himself in dreams of Lilith... and of Lilith's mother.

The house was unaccountably still and empty, so he had time to think.

Maybe Irene's feelings were hurt. He oughtn't to have been abrupt in the way he spoke. But then she was always so sensible, always could see the wisdom of his views of anything. Maybe she was tired and a rest at Miss Betty Coleman's would do her good. She'd come home next day, and be laughing about the house as usual, seeing the funny side of everything.

But she didn't come home next day, nor the next. Four days in a row, like ducks marching down to a pond.

He missed her in a thousand ways. She always knew who was sick enough to need a pastoral call, or who was unhappy or in trouble. She knew where his clothes were kept, and laid them out for him each morning. It was provoking to have to tumble over every dresser drawer to find clean underwear, to wonder where in heck his good clothes were. She'd been darning his socks when he went away that morning. Pat and Sheba were no help at all, and Miss Mattie was a pest. It was hard on a man who had problems on his mind, in this heat, too, to have to bother about petty details that women ought to attend to.

Then, in other ways besides those that affected his own convenience, he missed Irene. She was so restful, she so instantly understood his mood with that sort of clairvoyance which some women have, and she comforted his spirit as she made his body comfortable. Why did she go away? It wasn't like her to leave him like this.

On the fifth day he drove out to Miss Betty Coleman's. He found Irene alone in a hammock on the vine-shaded porch.

"Aren't you ready to come home?" he asked, unable to keep a hint of injury out of his tone. "House is awful empty without you."

"Only the house?" she queried with uplifted eyebrows. She didn't spring to greet him, as she always did at home, even when he had been gone but half a day.

"No. I miss you horribly."

She looked at him with grave eyes, whose meaning he could not read.

He stooped before her like an abashed boy and hurried on with his admissions. "I've come to think maybe I was wrong in the matter of Lilith. I guess I should have let you decide that, I'm sorry, Irene." Still those sad eyes questioned him.

"Will you forgive me, Irene?" he faltered.

In an instant she was in his arms, her cheek against his.

"Oh, Guinn, there no question of forgiveness between us, if only you love me!"

"Of course I do!" Then he hesitated, his arms tightened about her. "But I wrote to Lilith that morning that she could stay. It's too late to change now. That will have to stand."

Her hands passed caressingly over his dark hair. "Well, dear, we'll just have to trust it turns out all right."

So she rode home with Guinn and assured Miss Mattie that she felt much rested.

"Stay longer next time," scolded Miss Mattie. "Husbands had ought to be weaned."

Irene's laugh sounded rested.

The name "mince pies" was invented by the Puritans in Colonial days, as they objected to the name "Christmas pies." Under the name "mutton pies," similar pies were known in England as early as 1596. Later, ox tongue was substituted for mutton, and then chopped beef took its place. Otherwise, the ingredients have remained about the same.

When Hawks Swooped Out of the West

To a New Coast-to-Coast Non-Stop Record

Bright noon at Roosevelt Field! Gradually a slight clouding in the West and the February sun became a little bleaker. The flat, level field with some standing water from yesterday's rain and the faint, hazy outlines of the spires of Garden City, looked to one observer, like a small bit of old Holland, except for the intermittent roar and zoom of airplanes and the group of people standing in the lee of a distinctively American institution, a hot dog stand.

Clustered near this stand, the small groups conversed quietly about sundry matters, but the frequent shifting of glances to the West betrayed every man's thoughts were.

Occasionally, someone would stop, peer and exclaim "Here he comes now!"

"No."

"Yes."

"No—that's a biplane."

Then again, "This looks like him."

"No, it can't be, they wired that his ship has a red fuselage and aluminum wings."

Several such false starts made a fine scurrying out to their posts by the photographers and movie news reel men. Then, as the hands of the clock nearly touched three, there was a little dot in sight—due west—nearer it came, like a homing dove, like a bullet. This must be Hawks. It was!

Past us with a roar. Then over he went, throwing the plane into a vertical bank, a shaft of sunlight striking the aluminum wings and turning them to silver. Around it came like a joy-maddened creature—twice, in huge, tearing circles around the field, thrilling the group below. This was the real thing! From then on, all other planes seemed stodgy and dwarfed. This Lockheed had authority. The flash of it around the field seemed to those who knew it as Frank Hawks' aerial signature, the certain verve of it, a flourish like the famous signature of John Hancock on the "Declaration"—unmistakable!

Back he went into the West again and then at a flat slant, the plane came to ground. The official time-keeper snapped his stopwatch and the non-stop Coast to Coast record was comfortably broken.

There were cheers and a mad rush to surround the trim, beautiful Lockheed. Hardly heeding the yet-whirling propeller the crowd surged out to greet and acclaim Hawks.

Hawks sat nearly immobile in the little exposed cockpit. Only the flash of his strong white teeth showed his consciousness of victory.

Slowly he pushed up his goggles and stretched his back and neck muscles very like a man who has been slightly stiffened from falling asleep in a Pullman chair. He looked about him, recognizing among the small sea of faces those whom he knew, his wife, his Texaco friends and Bill Brock and some other famous fliers who had journeyed out to Roosevelt Field to welcome and congratulate him.

Then up came the heavy artillery, the news photographers, camera men and reporters. Hawks modestly, graciously obliged.

Meanwhile, the door of the cabin had been opened and fairly stumbling into the arms of some of the spectators emerged the partner of this intrepid flight, Oscar Grubb, able and faithful mechanic.

Small wonder he had no ears for the applause—for eighteen hours he had been confined in the cabin at the non-spectacular, but nevertheless necessary task of pumping gasoline up into the wing tanks. As a general thing Irene took his calls for him and tempered their demands as best she could, while Tina sang any numbers that he wished and relayed messages for him.

Man-like, he felt his own discomfort first, a rebellion that he couldn't decide a matter with regard to his own child without upsetting the household. And then, because he was in most respects a just man, he began to see Irene's side of this affair. Perhaps he had acted hastily. Women liked to be consulted about things, even if you didn't take their advice. And

Irene's judgment was usually good, better than his own, in fact. He allowed her a free hand with the other children—but Lilith was different. His mind wandered off to Lilith in New York, and even the thought of her brought to him the subtle fascination she exerted over him. Shut in his bedroom to get away from Miss Mattie (he might have to barricade himself in the bathroom next to escape the clatter tongue!) he gazed out over the treetops toward the distant blue, and indulged himself in dreams of Lilith... and of Lilith's mother.

The house was unaccountably still and empty, so he had time to think. Maybe Irene's feelings were hurt. He oughtn't to have been abrupt in the way he spoke. But then she was always so sensible, always could see the wisdom of his views of anything. Maybe she was tired and a rest at Miss Betty Coleman's would do her good. She'd come home next day, and be laughing about the house as usual, seeing the funny side of everything.

But she didn't come home next day, nor the next. Four days in a row, like ducks marching down to a pond.

He missed her in a thousand ways. She always knew who was sick enough to need a pastoral call, or who was unhappy or in trouble. She knew where his clothes were kept, and laid them out for him each morning. It was provoking to have to tumble over every dresser drawer to find clean underwear, to wonder where in heck his good clothes were. She'd been darning his socks when he went away this morning. Pat and Sheba were no help at all, and Miss Mattie was a pest. It was hard on a man who had problems on his mind, in this heat, too, to have to bother about petty details that women ought to attend to.

Then, in other ways besides those that affected his own convenience, he missed Irene. She was so restful, she so instantly understood his mood with that sort of clairvoyance which some women have, and she comforted his spirit as she made his body comfortable. . . . Why did she go away? It wasn't like her to leave him like this.

On the fifth day he drove out to Miss Betty Coleman's. He found Irene alone in a hammock on the vine-shaded porch.

"Aren't you ready to come home?" he asked, unable to keep a hint of injury out of his tone. "House is awful empty without you."

"Only the house?" she queried with uplifted eyebrows. She didn't spring to greet him, as she always did at home, even when he had been gone but half a day.

"No. I miss you horribly."

She looked at him with grave eyes, whose meaning he could not read.

He stood before her like an abashed boy and hurried on with his admissions. "I've come to think maybe I was wrong in the matter of Lilith. I guess I should have let you decide that. I'm sorry, Irene." Still those sad eyes questioned him.

"Will you forgive me, Irene?" he faltered.

In an instant she was in his arms, her cheek against him.

"Oh, Guinn, there's no question of forgiveness between us, if only you love me!"

"Of course I do!" Then he hesitated, his arms tightened about her. "But I wrote to Lilith that morning that she could stay. It's too late to change now. That will have to stand."

Her hands passed caressingly over his dark hair. "Well, dear, we'll just have to trust it turns out all right."

So she rode home with Guinn and assured Miss Mattie that she felt much rested.

"Stay longer next time," scolded Miss Mattie. "Husbands had ought to be weaned."

Irene's laugh sounded rested.

ALMA RUBENS CITED TO TESTIFY IN COURT DISCLOSURE

Los Angeles, Cal., March 1—(UP)—In compliance with her physician's orders, Alma Rubens, screen actress and central figure in disclosures of alleged illegal narcotic traffic in California, failed to appear before the federal grand jury today in answer to a subpoena.

Admirals from the film star's doctor said her physical condition would not permit her to attend.

Farmland Possibilities

Before the days of synthetic feeding there are vast areas to be tapped. Brazil alone could support two-thirds of the present world population, and Africa could feed many millions more than the present inhabitants of the earth.

Livestock Shipments to South St. Paul Exchange

St. Paul, March 2.—(UP)—Livestock shipments to the South St. Paul exchange have increased 310 per cent during the last six years, the state railroad and warehouse commission announced today.

More than 800,000 animals were shipped to the market in 1928 compared to 197,155 in 1923.

The majority of shipments came from points within a 50-mile radius.

GAS TAX TOPIC OF COUNTY ROAD MEN

Commissioners, Engineers, Discuss State Aid Distribution at Conventions

Distribution of the money which will come to the counties from one third of the gas tax was the main topic at the meetings of the state association of county commissioners and the Minnesota Surveyors and Engineers society in St. Paul last week. Besides discussing this question in the meetings of each organization, the engineers and county commissioners had one joint session and also held informal discussions with legislative members. County Commissioners F. J. Lowe, John Holvick, John Dewing and County Highway Engineer Walter M. Murphy of Crow Wing county attended the sessions. District Highway Engineer A. W. Moulster, City Engineer R. T. Campbell, C. O. Harholdt, and Kirk J. Smith also attended.

Care in seeing that the best possible results are obtained with the new state road funds was urged by C. M. Babcock, commissioner of highways, in talks before both organizations. Mr. Babcock pointed out that the three large counties had supported the Dunn good roads amendment in 1912, the trunk highway amendment in 1920 and the gas tax amendment in 1924, but all three cast majorities against the amendment to divide the gas tax. These counties contribute more than 40 per cent of the trunk highway and state aid funds but get back very little of it. They cast 40 per cent of the total vote and this is likely to increase.

The manner in which the gas tax money is spent will have much to do with the attitude of the cities towards future road problems, he pointed out, adding that any plan to be of real value must consider the interests of the whole state and have the support of all parts of the state.

It is not enough that the county officials spend the state aid money, Mr. Babcock added. They should have a well planned road program, looking to the future needs of the county. They should locate their roads and build them so they will not have to be rebuilt in a few years. Gravel may be wasted by surfacing roads before they are properly graded, and this should be avoided. There are a great many places, he added, where the road mileage could be materially reduced and the public better served if the roads were properly located.

Competent engineering guidance should be followed in all road building, Mr. Babcock said, but he explained that the Highway department was not seeking power to supervise the expenditure of the state aid gas tax, as the state highway engineers have plenty of work at present.

Mr. Babcock urged that adequate funds be provided for trunk highway improvements. If this is not done, he said, much of the traffic which should go on the trunk routes will overflow on the secondary roads, seriously damaging them and adding to the expense of the counties, so that even with their increased funds they will have no better roads.

Mr. Babcock added that they should have a well planned road program, looking to the future needs of the county. They should locate their roads and build them so they will not have to be rebuilt in a few years. Gravel may be wasted by surfacing roads before they are properly graded, and this should be avoided. W. BARRON RITES HERE MONDAY

Old Time Brainerdite Passed Away Yesterday at Minneapolis

LIVED HERE 40 YEARS

Was Chief of Police in Early Nineties; Also School Board Member

Information was received this morning of the death in Minneapolis of William Barron, old time Brainerdite.

The end came at the St. Mary's hospital yesterday morning after Mr. Barron had been removed from his home at Robbinsdale, Minn., for treatment.

Mr. Barron, who was 75 years of age, lived at Brainerd for 40 years before moving to Robbinsdale six years ago. In the early 90's he was chief of police in Brainerd. He was also a member of the Brainerd school board from the third ward and was street commissioner for a number of years.

Funeral rites will be conducted from the St. Francis church, Brainerd at 8:20 a. m. Monday, Rev. James Hegan officiating. Interment will be at Evergreen cemetery. The body will arrive in Brainerd tomorrow.

Mr. Barron leaves four sons and two daughters.

COMMON JURY GIVES UP STRUGGLE WITH HIGH ART

VALIANTLY TRIED TO ABSORB TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE OF FLORENTINE ART

UNABLE TO AGREE ON AUTHENTICITY OF "LA BELLE FERRONIERE"

New York, March 2.—(UP)—A jury that for four weeks has valiantly tried to absorb technical knowledge of Florentine art gave up the puzzle of the two "La Belle Ferronieres" just before dawn today.

The twelve jurors, ten of whom admitted they knew nothing about art, were discharged by Justice William H. Black in supreme court after they reported they were unable to agree on the question of whether the "La Belle Ferroniere" owned by Mrs. Andree Hahn or the one in the Louvre was painted by Leonardo Da Vinci.

Mrs. Hahn brought suit against Sir Joseph Duveen, the internationally known art dealer, charging that when he pronounced her picture a copy of the one in the Louvre, he ruined her chance of selling it to the Kansas City Art Institute.

The DeMolays will meet Monday evening at the Masonic hall at which time they will confer the initiatory degree on 11 candidates.

The business meeting will start at 7:30 sharp, to be followed by the initiatory degree. Refreshments will be served later.

All DeMolays are expected to be present, and a cordial invitation has been extended to all Masons to be present at this time.

tute. She asked $500,000 damages but in his charge to the jury, Justice Black fixed $250,000 as the maximum damages possible.

"I am bitterly disappointed," Mrs. Hahn said after the jury reported. "But I shall continue to fight this case."

It was shortly after 3 P. M. yesterday that the 12 men, their heads buzzing with such technical terms as "aesthetic nuances" and "inferior pigmentation" were locked into a small room and charged with the task of settling in terms of dollars and cents a question that has kept art experts at one another's throats since 1921.

A hotel clerk, two agents, two real estate dealers, a poster artist, a shirt maker, a women's wear manufacturer, an upholsterer, an artist, an accountant and a man who said he did nothing at all, were in the group that filed from the courtroom. But before they left the room, George W. Whiteside, Sir Joseph's suave, analytical lawyer, in a voice that throbbed, consigned the soul of Leonardo Da Vinci to their keeping.

"Leonardo's soul must be in your souls today. Remember that before you can render any judgment for the plaintiff you must tear down that great picture from the Louvre. Oh, if you might see the one in the Louvre!"

There was applause. B. H. Dunzi, a bearded painter, was led from the room by a bailiff for disturbing order in the court.

Throughout last night Sir Joseph paced the corridor outside and S. Lawrence Miller, counsel for Mrs. Hahn, leaned against the wall. A friend approached Sir Joseph and said:

"Five hundred to one that you win."

"I'll take that," shouted Miller. Today all bet's were off.

ALMA RUBENS CITED TO TESTIFY IN COURT DISCLOSURE

Los Angeles, Cal., March 1—(UP)—In compliance with her physician's orders, Alma Rubens, screen actress and central figure in disclosures of alleged illegal narcotic traffic in California, failed to appear before the federal grand jury today in answer to a subpoena.

Affidavits from the film star's doctor said her physical condition would not permit her to attend.

Farmhand Possibilities

Before the days of synthetic feeding there are vast areas to be tapped Brazil alone could support two-thirds of the present world population, and Africa could feed many millions more than the present inhabitants of the earth.

Livestock Shipments to South St. Paul Exchange

St. Paul, March 2.—(UP)—Livestock shipments to the South St. Paul exchange have increased 310 per cent during the last six years, the state railroad and warehouse commission announced today.

More than 800,000 animals were shipped to the market in 1928 compared to 197,155 in 1923.

The majority of shipments came from points within a 50-mile radius.

GAS TAX TOPIC OF COUNTY ROAD MEN

Commissioners, Engineers, Discuss State Aid Distribution at Conventions

Distribution of the money which will come to the counties from one third of the gas tax was the main topic at the meetings of the state association of county commissioners and the Minnesota Surveyors and Engineers society in St. Paul last week. Besides discussing this question in the meetings of each organization, the engineers and county commissioners had one joint session and also held informal discussions with legislative members. County Commissioners F. J. Lowry, John Holvick, John Dewing and County Highway Engineer Walter M. Murphy of Crow Wing county attended the sessions. District Highway Engineer A. W. Moulster, City Engineer R. T. Campbell, C. O. Harholdt, and Kirk J. Smith also attended.

Care in seeing that the best possible results are obtained with the new state road funds was urged by C. M. Babcock, commissioner of highways, in talks before both organizations. Mr. Babcock pointed out that the three large counties had supported the Dunn good roads amendment in 1912, the trunk highway amendment in 1920 and the gas tax amendment in 1924, but all three cast majorities against the amendment to divide the gas tax. These counties contribute more than 40 per cent of the trunk highway and state aid funds but get back very little of it. They cast 40 per cent of the total vote and this is likely to increase. The manner in which the gas tax money is spent will have much to do with the attitude of the cities towards future road problems, he pointed out, adding that any plan to be of real value must consider the interests of the whole state and have the support of all parts of the state.

It is not enough that the county officials spend the state aid money, Mr. Babcock added. They should have a well planned road program looking to the future needs of the county. They should locate their roads and build them so they will not have to be rebuilt in a few years. Gravel may be wasted by surfacing roads before they are properly graded, and this should be avoided. There are a great many places, he added, where the road mileage could be materially reduced and the public better served if the roads were properly located.

Competent engineering guidance should be followed in all road building, Mr. Babcock said, but he explained that the Highway department was not seeking power to supervise the expenditure of the state aid gas tax, as the state highway engineers have plenty of work at present.

Mr. Babcock urged that adequate funds be provided for trunk highway improvements. If this is not done, he said, much of the traffic which should go on the trunk routes will overflow on the secondary roads, seriously damaging them and adding to the expense of the counties, so that even with their increased funds they will have no better roads.

W. BARRON RITES HERE MONDAY

Old Time Brainerdite Passed Away Yesterday at Minneapolis

LIVED HERE 40 YEARS

Was Chief of Police in Early Nineties; Also School Board Member

Information was received this morning of the death in Minneapolis of William Barron, old time Brainerdite.

The end came at the St. Mary's hospital yesterday morning after Mr. Barron had been removed from his home at Robbinsdale, Minn., for treatment.

Mr. Barron, who was 75 years of age, lived at Brainerd for 40 years before moving to Robbinsdale six years ago. In the early 90's he was chief of police in Brainerd. He was also a member of the Brainerd school board from the third ward and was street commissioner for a number of years.

Funeral rites will be conducted from the St. Francis church, Brainerd at 8:20 a. m. Monday, Rev. James Hegan officiating. Interment will be at Evergreen cemetery. The body will arrive in Brainerd tomorrow.

Mr. Barron leaves four sons and two daughters.

COMMON JURY GIVES UP STRUGGLE WITH HIGH ART

VALIANTLY TRIED TO ABSORB TECHNICAL KNOWLEDGE OF FLORENTINE ART

UNABLE TO AGREE ON AUTHENTICITY OF "LA BELLE FERRONIERE"

New York, March 2.—(UP)—A jury that for four weeks has valiantly tried to absorb technical knowledge of Florentine art gave up the puzzle of the two "La Belle Ferronieres" just before dawn today.

The twelve jurors, ten of whom admitted they knew nothing about art, were discharged by Justice William H. Black in supreme court after they reported they were unable to agree on the question of whether the "La Belle Ferroniere" owned by Mrs. Andree Hahn or the one in the Louvre was painted by Leonardo Da Vinci.

Mrs. Hahn brought suit against Sir Joseph Duveen, the internationally known art dealer, charging that when he pronounced her picture a copy of the one in the Louvre, he ruined her chance of selling it to the Kansas City Art Institute.

tute. She asked $500,000 damages but in his charge to the jury, Justice Black fixed $250,000 as the maximum damages possible.

"I am bitterly disappointed," Mrs. Hahn said after the jury reported. "But I shall continue to fight this case."

It was shortly after 3 P. M. yesterday that the 12 men, their heads buzzing with such technical terms as "aesthetic nuances" and "inferior pigmentation" were locked into a small room and charged with the task of settling in terms of dollars and cents a question that has kept art experts at one another's throats since 1921.

A hotel clerk, two agents, two real estate dealers, a poster artist, a shirt maker, a women's wear manufacturer, an upholsterer, an artist, an accountant and a man who said he did nothing at all, were in the group that filed from the courtroom. But before they left the room, George W. Whiteside, Sir Joseph's suave, analytical lawyer, in a voice that throbbed, consigned the soul of Leonardo Da Vinci to their keeping.

"Leonardo's soul must be in your souls today. Remember that before you can render any judgment for the plaintiff you must tear down that great picture from the Louvre. Oh, if you might see the one in the Louvre!"

There was applause. B. H. Dunzi, a bearded painter, was led from the room by a bailiff for disturbing order in the court.

Throughout last night Sir Joseph paced the corridor outside and S. Lawrence Miller, counsel for Mrs. Hahn, leaned against the wall. A friend approached Sir Joseph and said:

"Five hundred to one that you win."

"I'll take that," shouted Miller. Today all bet's were off.

SPEAKS IN FAVOR OF THE ONE BUCK LAW

Attorney Hilding Swanson, Brainerd, Appears Before House and Senate Committee

EXPRESSES HUNTERS' DESIRE

Mike Marea Speaks Against Sullivan-Lewis Duck Pass Bill at Public Meet

Attorney Hilding Swanson, Brainerd, appeared before the Fish and Game Committee of the house and senate at a public hearing Thursday at the State Capitol and spoke in favor of the One Buck Law as proposed. Mr. Swanson returned to Brainerd last evening.

At the same meeting Mike Marea spoke against the proposed Sullivan-Lewis Duck Pass Bill.

Mr. Swanson reported that the One Buck Law is meeting with favor throughout the state and that the Duck Pass Bill is receiving considerable opposition.

The One Buck Law would limit deer hunting to bucks with an open season each year.

The proposed Duck Pass Bill would do away with private owned passes.

Mr. Swanson stated to the Dispatch:

"There are 27 states which have the One Buck Law. Eight states include buck and doe hunting each year and 13 states have closed seasons on deer hunting."

"Minnesota should adopt the One Buck Law for at least two years to determine if it would be beneficial as it has been found effective in other states. In Pennsylvania during the time the One Buck Law was in force deer increased to such an extent that it was necessary to put into effect a law where they might shoot both buck and doe."

"Minnesota is the only state where shooting of deer is restricted to every other year. In the other 35 states where shooting is allowed hunters are permitted to shoot every year."

ALL SET FOR A QUICK PICK-UP

Radio to Take Inaugural to Entire World

ARRANGEMENTS completed by the National Broadcasting Company provide for world-wide reception of the broadcast of the inauguration of President-elect Herbert Hoover. The ceremonies will be heard through the 58 radio stations associated with the NBC and will be sent on short waves to all parts of the world.

Above is an artist's conception of the scenes in Washington, Monday, March 4, when the President will take the oath of office.

A detailed description of the scenes follows:

(1) For the first time in history, microphones will be installed in the chamber of the United States Senate. An NBC announcer will be located in a specially constructed booth within the chamber, from which point he will describe the induction into office of Charles Curtis, the new Vice President. Another microphone will be placed at the Vice President's desk so that the actual swearing in ceremony may be heard by radio listeners. Still a third microphone will be put over the door into the Senate, at which point the Senate doorkeeper will announce the distinguished guests attending the ceremonies in the Senate.

(2) At the United States Capitol, where Herbert Hoover will take his oath of office and deliver his inaugural speech. An NBC announcer will be located just in the rear of the Presidential box, a good point of vantage which enables him to watch the ceremonies and view the great crowds. Microphones will be directly in front of Mr. Hoover to pick up the affirming ceremony and the inaugural address. A third microphone will be in front of the Presidential stand to pick up band music.

(3) Peace Monument, at the foot of the Capitol. It is from this point that an NBC announcer will describe the Presidential party after leaving the Capitol and heading for the White House. Incidentally, the inaugural parade swings into Pennsylvania Avenue to this point. Overhead, the drawing shows an army dirigible and an airplane from which

NBC announcers will describe the inauguration and the parade.

(4) The inaugural parade, a colorful and elaborate event, will be described in great detail. The drawing shows an announcer at the Treasury Department, which is at the head of Pennsylvania Avenue. The announcer will have a view of the entire avenue.

(5) The reviewing stand in front of the White House. NBC announcers will be only a few feet away from Mr. Hoover, thus being able to describe all that takes place in the Presidential box. Also, from this point announcers will describe the parade as it passes the new Chief Executive in review. In the rear of the stand the White House itself can be seen. At the portico of the White House, announcers will describe the Presidential party leaving for the Capitol and its return after the ceremonies.

The National Broadcasting Company also will broadcast the Inaugural Charity ball beginning at 11 o'clock at night, March 4. This broadcast will continue 90 minutes.

President Lauds Washington's Words

Advising America to maintain friendly relations with foreign countries without entangling alliances, President Coolidge made his farewell address after five and a half years as Chief Executive at George Washington University, Washington, D. C., where the President and Mrs. Coolidge, seated, were given honorary degrees.

ARRANGEMENTS completed by the National Broadcasting Company provide for world-wide reception of the broadcast of the inauguration of President-elect Herbert Hoover. The ceremonies will be heard through the 38 radio stations associated with the NBC and will be sent on short waves to all parts of the world.

Above is an artist's conception of the scenes in Washington, Monday, March 4, when the President will take the oath of office.

A detailed description of the scenes follows:

(1) For the first time in history, microphones will be installed in the chamber of the United States Senate. An NBC announcer will be located in a specially constructed booth within the chamber, from which point he will describe the induction into office of Charles Curtis, the new Vice President. Another microphone will be placed at the Vice President's desk so that the actual swearing in ceremonies may be heard by radio listeners. Still a third microphone will be put over the door into the Senate, at which point the Senate doorkeeper will announce the distinguished guests attending the ceremonies in the Senate.

(2) At the United States Capitol, where Herbert Hoover will take his oath of office and deliver his Inaugural speech. An NBC announcer will be located just in the rear of the Presidential box, a good point of vantage which enables him to watch the ceremonies and view the great crowds. Microphones will be directly in front of Mr. Hoover to pick up the affirming ceremonies and the Inaugural address. A third microphone will be in front of the Presidential stand to pick up hand music.

(3) Peace Monument, at the foot of the Capitol. It is from this point that an NBC announcer will describe the Presidential party after leaving the Capitol and heading for the White House. Incidentally, the Inaugural parade swings into Pennsylvania Avenue to this point. Overhead, the drawing shows an army dirigible and an airplane from which

NBC announcers will describe the Inauguration and the parade.

(4) The Inaugural parade, a colorful and elaborate event, will be described in great detail. The drawing shows an announcer at the Treasury Department, which is at the head of Pennsylvania Avenue. The announcer will have a view of the entire avenue.

(5) The reviewing stand in front of the White House. NBC announcers will be only a few feet away from Mr. Hoover, thus being able to describe all that takes place in the Presidential box. Also, from this point announcers will describe the parade as it passes the new Chief Executive in review. In the rear of the stand the White House itself can be seen. At the portico of the White House, announcers will describe the Presidential party leaving for the Capitol and its return after the ceremonies.

The National Broadcasting Company also will broadcast the Inaugural Charity ball beginning at 11 o'clock at night, March 4. This broadcast will continue 90 minutes.
